Strathbogie Shire Council's Michelle Bromley recognised for her outstanding efforts

Strathbogie Shire Council's Michelle Bromley was awarded the Records and Information Management Professionals Australasia (RIMPA) Victoria Branch Individual Achievement Award for 2017.

RIMPA received very strong nominations from a large number of organisations for the award, and Michelle was chosen as the winner in the Individual Achievement division for outstanding achievement in records and information management and contribution to the records and information management industry.

Michelle is a highly regarded, hard-working member of Council and leads the Records Management Team in managing Council records in line with current standards and requirements.

Under Michelle's leadership, the Records Management team provides internal and external customer service with efficient, accurate and reliable registration of Council's corporate records.

Strathbogie Shire Council CEO, Steve Crawcour said Michelle is an outstanding member of Council's team.

"Michelle Bromley, Records Coordinator, has proven herself to have an exemplary dedication to Corporate Records Management and strives to maintain a high standard of Records Management," he said.

"On behalf of Council, I would like to congratulate Michelle and thank her for her continued dedication to Records Management," Steve said.

One of the really exciting things Michelle has achieved was leading the successful implementation and transition for the Planning team from a paper based environment to an electronic environment.

As a result, many new automated workflows and processes have been established to improve processes and create efficiencies, whilst recording valuable actions against records.
